Hi Larry,

We've cross-referenced your list with ours. All the patients on our list have been shaded and we've given the way it is reported here if it is in anyway different from yours. For example, yours might say <5% and ours says negative. There are a couple that are truly different though. If the comment field is blank then ours says the same thing. We did note that the MCP number provided for [REDACTED] was [REDACTED] - ours is [REDACTED]

As we only have the "shaded" people on our list, is it your plan to call the rest? I started second guessing our decision we made yesterday for us to call all of yours on our list night. My first call yesterday ended up being to a husband of a lady who died. This was after we had checked the Telegram obituaries and Memorials Online and pulled Cancer Clinic charts. After that I accessed each individuals meditech record before I called and did pick up on two more that had died. I was thinking that if your staff could do that, it would save both them and the person on the other end a lot of torment.

Anyway, give it a thought and let me know
